RAI: ICP and Buyer Personas

Version 2.0 | 21 August 2026 | Supersedes the RAI section of the consolidated ICP document

1. What we are selling

RAI runs the revenue motion end to end: research, planning, multi-channel outreach across email, LinkedIn, calling and WhatsApp, follow-up, sales support and analytics, replacing the twenty-plus tools and the headcount that motion normally requires. It also does something the tool stack never did: it makes the sales function itself visible. It shows who is performing and who is not, runs the process alongside the team, learns from every cycle, and returns insights.

So RAI is bought for two different reasons, and both are in the ICP. The first buyer has no sales capacity and needs the motion run for them. The second buyer has a sales team and cannot see inside it.

2. Geography

India first, US second.

3. The ICP definition

A qualified RAI account has all four of these properties:

1. It sells B2B. This is the hard qualifier.
2. It is digital enough to run its motion through email, LinkedIn, calling and WhatsApp.
3. It has one of the two pains: it cannot hire or afford good salespeople, or it has salespeople and no transparency on how they perform.
4. The decision maker is reachable: an owner, a founder, a CEO or a CRO who can commit without a procurement committee.

The exclusion: D2C and B2C companies are out. Their motion is ads, ads are the one thing RAI is not yet strong at, and pitching them today creates disappointed customers. Revisit when the ads capability matures.

4. Target segments

Segment	What they look like	The pain	What RAI gives them
Small and medium businesses	B2B businesses, funded or not, that cannot find, afford or retain great salespeople	The owner is the sales team; growth is capped by the hours in their day; every SDR hire is a costly gamble that usually fails	The entire revenue motion run for them at software cost: research, outreach, follow-up, booking. Roughly one cent per personalised reach-out instead of a salary
Mid-size companies with existing sales teams	Companies running 50 to 200 or more salespeople	Zero real visibility on the team: who is performing, who is coasting, why deals die; the CRM records activity, it does not explain it	Performance transparency across every rep, the process run alongside the team, and insights that compound: what worked, for whom, on which segment. Management finally sees the machine
Startup founders, non-funded	Bootstrapped B2B startups	Without capital they cannot hire a GTM team at all, so they cannot scale, so they cannot raise	Scale without the team. The founder gets out of the outbound seat and the pipeline grows anyway
Startup founders, funded	Seed to Series B B2B startups	The opposite pressure: capital comes with a mandate to scale GTM fast and hit acquisition numbers, and hiring cannot keep pace	Purpose-built for exactly this: rapid GTM scale, more acquisitions, without waiting two quarters for an SDR team to ramp

Marketing agencies	Agencies running demand generation and campaigns for B2B clients	Delivery capacity is headcount; every new client means new hires; margins compress	Each account pod delivers multiples of the output; outbound becomes a service they can sell; margin per client recovers. One agency serves many clients, so one yes multiplies
Sales enablement companies	Consultancies and trainers paid to improve client sales performance	They diagnose and advise, but execution stays manual inside the client	RAI becomes the execution and measurement engine behind their advice; their recommendations turn into a running system they can point to
VC firms running portfolio GTM	Funds offering GTM support across the portfolio as a competitive edge	Cannot staff a GTM platform team per portfolio company	Every portfolio company gets a revenue engine on day one; one platform decision serves twenty to fifty companies

5. The ABM persona map

The persona ladder in RAI is decided by whether a sales team exists.

Where there is no team, the owner or founder is the user, the influencer and the decision maker in one chair, and the sale is a single conversation that must survive with no internal advocate.

The moment a team exists, the ladder appears. The daily users are the reps and the sales ops people. The influencer is whoever is measured on the number: the Head of Sales, the CRO, the Head of Growth. And that influencer is also the potential blocker, because a platform that makes individual performance visible is a platform that makes their management visible too. The decision maker is the CEO in mid-size companies, the founder in startups, the GP in a fund, the agency owner in an agency.

Segment	User (daily)	Influencer	Decision maker	Blocker to watch
SMB	The owner	The owner	The owner	Nobody internal; the risk is inertia and past disappointment with tools
Mid-size with sales team	Reps, sales ops, RevOps analysts	Head of Sales or CRO, COO	CEO, sometimes the CRO with budget authority	Sales managers whose performance becomes visible; the person who bought the current CRM and tool stack
Startup, non-funded	Founder	Founder	Founder	Cash sensitivity; price must clear the "cheaper than any hire" bar instantly
Startup, funded	Head of Growth or GTM, founder	Head of Growth, sometimes the lead investor	Founder or CEO	A newly hired VP Sales who wants to build a human team as their mandate
Marketing agency	Account and delivery managers	Head of Delivery or Client Services	Agency founder or CEO	Billable-hours business model instincts; fear of clients asking why they are paying agency rates

Segment	User (daily)	Influencer	Decision maker	Blocker to watch
Sales enablement company	Consultants and trainers	Practice lead	Founder or CEO	Fear of automating away their own advisory revenue
VC firm	Platform or portfolio operations lead	Platform lead, principals	GP or managing partner	Portfolio founders who resist fund-pushed tooling

6. Entry point by company size

Owner-run and solo. Enter at the person. Self-serve or founder-led, one conversation, immediate value.

Startups. Enter at the founder. In funded startups, bring the Head of Growth into the first conversation because they will run it and can kill it.

Mid-size with a sales team. Enter at the CRO or Head of Sales, not the CEO. If the number-owner is not won first, they will block from below, and they are right to: the platform reports on their world. Win them, and they carry it to the CEO as their own initiative.

Agencies, enablement companies and VC firms. Enter at the practice, delivery or platform lead, close with the founder or GP. These three are one-to-many accounts: a single close deploys across a client roster or a portfolio, which makes them the highest-leverage segment on this list.

7. Anti-targets and partner routes

D2C and B2C companies are out until the ads capability is genuinely strong. Large enterprise sales organisations with formal procurement remain partner-led: the 200-rep mid-size company with a reachable CEO is in the ICP, the 2,000-rep enterprise with a vendor onboarding portal is not, until a partner carries it.

8. Qualification checklist

1. Do they sell B2B? If they are D2C or B2C, stop.
2. Is their motion digital: email, LinkedIn, calling, WhatsApp?

3. Which pain: no sales capacity, or no visibility into the sales team they have?
4. Can we reach the owner, founder, CEO or CRO directly?
5. Is it an agency, enablement company or fund? If yes, treat as one-to-many and prioritise.
6. Would this deal require formal procurement? If yes, partner-led.
